Excerpt: . . . strengthen the authority of the State in sanitary work already recognized and to allow it to discharge duties not heretofore undertaken. Education in hygiene upon which better personal habits and higher standards of living must depend, needs development and should begin with the young child. The time has come when in the interest of the public health and better race development more attention must be devoted to the health and mental growth of children, including those mentally deficient. While the work of child hygiene has largely to do with schools, its supervision should begin at or before birth, and must continue beyond the average school age. The present investigation has recognized that many incidental improvements may be made without new legislation. Some of these that were recommended in detail, have in certain cases already been adopted. Recommendations. 1. The health functions of Illinois should be...
