Not illustrated. 1851 Excerpt: .as also what I was owing to any one; and found, after I had deducted what I was in debt to any, that my real and personal estate in all amounted to 1,274., and my profit last year, errors and bad debts excepted, was 93. In the 7th month this year, Henry Casson, innkeeper and chandler, died, aged about 55 years. He left a widow, and five sons, and one daughter. He got Jonathan Cawson, an attorney, to draw his will, who had more sense than integrity or solidity to make a will. Henry Casson had been a facetious and sociable companion over a quart of ale, as was his said clerk, --and, it was supposed, that he took the notes of it in intervals, so as to forget the preceding clauses; so that in the whole it was so confused that no man of the law could reconcile or make sense of it. However, he made his wife Mary whole executer of it, and named me and Henry Welsh in trust, to see his will truly performed, and an inventory was drawn, by which his personal estate appeared to be 548.; and he had an estate in houses and land, worth, at that time, 700. His widow administered, and took tuition of her children, and kept on the innkeeping, and making candles and soap, whilst she lived, which was six years after her husband; and made a will, and appointed me and Henry Welsh her...
